One month down, do you have a plan?

July is here and many Floridians are taking well-deserved time off for family vacations around the holidays. We are also one month into the 2006 Atlantic hurricane season that runs through November 30.

The good news is that many of you have taken the steps to get ready by taking advantage of the second annual sales-tax holiday on hurricane items. Recent studies, conducted by Florida State University, have shown that two-thirds of Florida’s 17 million residents say they have a plan. I applaud you!

For the other third, that might have missed our brush with Tropical Storm Alberto, it is not too late to GET A PLAN!

Here’s how. Simply go to www.FloridaDisaster.org where within a few minutes, you can build a customized disaster plan for your home or business.

The safety of you and your family depends on you taking the time and responsibility to prepare before a disaster strikes. It is also important to stay aware of severe weather threatening Florida throughout the year.

So it’s one month down and many more to go. Do you have a plan?

For more information on hurricane preparedness and to GET A PLAN! please go to: www.FloridaDisaster.org

Craig Fugate is the Director of the Florida Division of Emergency Management and serves as the State Coordinating Officer for the State Emergency Response Team.

# #